6. About the Southern California Region:

The Kaiser Permanente Southern California Region Grants Program provides support to nonprofit organizations, government entities, and academic institutions working to improve the health of our communities and eliminate health inequities.

Like our approach to medicine, our work in the community takes a prevention-focused, evidence-based approach. To be healthy, people need access to quality physical and mental health care, nutritious and affordable food, successful schools, and safe neighborhoods. Good health for the entire community also requires a focus on equity as well as social and economic well-being.

Kaiser Permanente shares its clinical practices, health education expertise, physician and employee volunteerism as part of our community partnerships.

- Access to Care: Community members have access to timely, coordinated, high quality health care from a trained and diverse workforce.
- Obesity and HEAL: Community members eat healthy and move more as part of daily life.
- Mental and Behavioral Health: Community members have optimal levels of mental health and wellbeing and access to high quality mental and behavioral health care services when needed.
- Economic Security: Community members experience improved economic security, including access to employment, educational and housing opportunities and other factors that influence health.
